15 passed.

(3) If any condition on which a person has been pardoned or released on parole or a punishment has been remitted is in the opinion of the authority which granted the pardon or release not fulfilled, such authority may cancel the pardon or release or remission and

(c) subject to the regulations made under this Act, the Central Government or the committing authority or such prescribed officer may at any time whilst the sentence is suspended issue an order of committal and thereupon the sentence shall cease to be suspended;

(2) When a person has been sentenced to imprisonment or detention and an order of committal has been issued, the Central Government or the committing authority, or prescribed officer may order the sentence to be suspended, and in such cases the person whose sentence is suspended shall be discharged and the currency of the sentence shall be suspended until he is again committed under the same sentence, and the provisions of clauses (b), (c) and (d) of sub-section (1) shall apply in like manner as in the case where a sentence has been suspended before an order of committal has been issued.

THE SCHEDULE

(See section 189)

Year	No.	Short title
1934	34	Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934.
1939		Indian Naval Reserve Forces (Discipline) Act, 1939.
1950	57	The Naval Forces (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1950.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

The existing law relating to the Navy is contained in the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934. This Act was passed pursuant to section 66 of the Government of India Act, 1919, (later replaced by section 105 of the Government of India Act, 1935,) which empowered the then Indian Legislature to apply to the Naval Forces raised in India the provisions of the U.K. Naval Discipline Act. Accordingly the U.K. Naval Discipline Act, as modified and set forth in the First Schedule to the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934 was made applicable to the Indian Naval Forces. When the constitutional changes took place, action was taken to adapt this Act and it now appears as a self-contained Act.

2. This Act dealt largely with disciplinary provisions. There were no statutory provisions concerning the various matters of administration, enrolment, grant of commissions, etc.

3. It was long considered that this lacuna should be filled and when the constitutional changes took place it became evident that it would be necessary to have a consolidating statute on the subject. In the meantime, in 1950, the revised Army Act and Air Force Act were passed by Parliament. It was not possible at that time to draft a revised Navy Bill as the present Act was modelled mainly on the corresponding British Act. In U.K., a special committee had been appointed to examine the question of the revision of the British Naval Code. It was thought that it would be an advantage to await the report of that Committee. The present draft has been made taking into account the report of that Committee.

4. In drawing up the present Bill, the provisions of the Army and Air Force Acts have been borne in mind, but changes have had to be accepted on account of difference of conditions of service of the Navy and Naval traditions and usages.

5. The main object of the present Bill is to make the law self-sufficient by incorporating the necessary provisions of certain other related enactments and regulations and to adapt the existing provisions to suit the new constitutional set-up and present day requirements.

6. The main changes in the existing law are as follows:—

(a) the maximum punishments have been modified to conform to the agreed decision concerning punishments in the three Services;

(b) provisions have been inserted concerning grant of commissions and enrolment in the Service and for prescribing conditions of service;

(c) provisions have been inserted pursuant to article 33 of the Constitution to restrict or abrogate the application of fundamental rights to the members of the Armed Forces in so far as this is necessary for the maintenance of discipline;

(d) provisions have been inserted for deductions from pay of officers and ratings for absence without leave, damage to Government property, etc.;

(e) the penal sections have been rationalised and a few amendments made which have been necessitated by experience;

(f) the jurisdiction to try civil offences has been modified to conform to that existing in the Army and Air Force;

(g) the main points of procedure of courts-martial have been incorporated in the Bill;

(h) officers of the non-executive branches of the Navy who were formerly not eligible to sit at courts-martial have been made eligible, it being provided, however, that the majority of the officers will consist of officers of the executive branch; it has also been provided that in certain special cases only officers of the executive branch should sit;

(i) provision has been made for issue of commissions to examine witnesses;

(j) the Indian Evidence Act has been made applicable to the proceedings of courts-martial;

(k) the judicial review of the Judge Advocate General of the Navy has been placed on a statutory basis and his qualifications have been prescribed;

(l) the existing naval courts-martial procedure permitting the accused to give evidence on oath has been continued with a slight modification to conform to the provisions in the Criminal Procedure Code as amended by the recent Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act;

(m) provision has been made for winding up of estates of deceased persons.

FINANCIAL MEMORANDUM

The Navy Bill provides, inter alia, for the following matters which involve expenditure from the Consolidated Fund of India not covered by the Acts sought to be repealed in the Bill:—

(1) The raising and maintenance of auxiliary naval forces. (Clause 4).

(2) Provision of free conveyance to their home to ratings discharged from service. [Clause 22(2)].

(3) The appointment of the Judge Advocate General of the Navy and his deputies and the fixation of their emoluments by Central Government. [Clause 173(2)].

2. At present no auxiliary naval force is maintained and as plans in this regard have not been finalised, it is not possible at this stage to indicate the extent of expenditure involved. As regards free conveyance to discharged ratings, the annual expenditure involved will depend on the number of ratings discharged per year, but based on past experience, it is roughly estimated at Rs. 2,000 per year.

3. The expenditure on the Judge Advocate General of the Navy and his Deputy and Assistant is estimated at Rs. 50,000 per year.

4. The expenditure on the last two items is already being incurred under executive orders as a part of Defence Services expenditure.

DELEGATED LEGISLATION

Clause 188 of the Bill empowers the Central Government to make regulations for the governance, command, discipline, recruitment, conditions of service and regulation of the Naval Forces and generally for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of the Act. Some of the matters with respect to which the Central Government may exercise this power have been specified in sub-clause (2) of that clause and relate to the rank, precedence, powers of command and the authority of officers and seamen in the Naval Service, retirement and discharge of persons in the Naval Service, constitution and convening of courts-martial and the procedure to be observed before the same, the terms and conditions of service, the pay, pensions, allowances and other benefits of persons in the Naval Service, realisation and disposal of the estates of deceased, missing or lunatic officers and seamen, inquiry into the conduct of prisoners of war and so on. All these matters are matters of administrative detail necessary for the day to day administration of the Act. The delegation of legislative power is thus of the normal type because it is both difficult and unnecessary to provide for these details in the enactment itself.
